Kennedy To Meet Rights Marchers

WASHINGTON (AP)—The White House said Monday that President Kennedy will meet with leaders of the civil rights march on Washington on Aug. 28.

White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger said leaders of the march had asked for an audience with Kennedy and that the President had agreed to see them at the White House. Salinger was asked if this would rule out participation by Kennedy in the day-long program.

"I think that possibility has always been ruled out," Salinger said.

The demonstration on behalf of Kennedy's civil rights program now before Congress is expected to draw an estimated 100,000 to 250,000 whites and Negroes to Washington.

Rail Unions Have Arbitration Plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Labor Department was informed Monday that railroad union attorneys will have ready by Tuesday afternoon their version of how an arbitration agreement should read to settle two key issues in the railroad work rules dispute.

A department spokesman said the railroad carriers' version of the key document, aimed at averting a nationwide rail strike on Aug. 29, already has been submitted.

The proposal for arbitration of the two key issues of firemen's jobs and the makeup of train crews was made by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz last Friday. He proposed also that lesser outstanding issues be settled by negotiation, with department assistance if needed.

Tension Mounts In Viet Nam

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP)—Tension mounted in three major South Vietnamese cities Monday, and rumors spread in Saigon of impending clashes between Buddhists and government forces. An army officer was reported mauled in Da Nang after firing on Buddhist demonstrators.

Buddhist leaders in Saigon, however, repeated their earlier announcement that they planned no major action in their dispute with the government until Henry Cabot Lodge arrives here Aug. 26 as the new U. S. ambassador.

Two Air Force Jets Collide

IRWIN, Iowa (AP)—Two Air Force B47 medium jet bombers collided in the air Monday while on a training mission and plunged to the ground in flames, scattering wreckage over the countryside.

A spokesman at a nearby Harlan Hospital said two of the six airmen reported aboard the bombers were dead on arrival.

Three others were being treated for burns and injuries, he said, and a fourth had been located alive following the thunderous smashup in overcast skies above this small western Iowa farming community.

U. S. Foreign Deficit Grows

WASHINGTON (AP)—This country's deficit in the international balance of payments ran considerably more than $1 billion in the second quarter of this year, the Commerce Department announced Monday.

The deficit increased sharply despite a strong showing in the commercial trade balance — an excess of exports over imports.

The large second quarter deficit, if continued for the remainder of the year, would result in the loss of more dollars than the record $3.9 billion outflow in 1960.

Factors which ran up the deficit were increased bank loans, a large increase in the amount of new foreign securities sold in this country and a rise in U. S. grants and loans to foreign countries.

Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market Monday slipped off its string of advances at six straight and ended the session mixed, with some barometers slightly lower. Trading lagged.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 51 at 718.81 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index .05 at 71.44—both small declines.

Of the 1,290 issues traded, gainers outnumbered losers by 521 to 505. New highs for the year totaled 61 and new lows 13.

HAZLETON, Pa. (AP)—Concern over one of three miners trapped nearly 400 feet underground since last Tuesday led weary rescue workers to a new effort Monday to drill a twin six-inch hole to the one through which they originally established contact with the men.

They gave up on their first try when the drill bit went past the depth where Louis Bova, 42, was believed to be. Bova is separated from the other two miners—David Fellin, 58, and Henry Throne, 28.

The workers couldn't start an escape hole for Fellin and Throne because it was impossible to move a rig with a larger drill to the area until bulldozers could create a road about one-fourth mile long.

"I'm quite concerned about Bova," said H. B. Charnbury, state mining secretary.

Rescue workers were drilling the twin hole with guidance from Fellin via a microphone lowered down the original six-inch shaft.

FOOD FOR TRAPPED MINERS — Rescue worker feeds lines with food attached through a 6-inch well casing to three trapped miners 400 feet below the surface at Hazleton, Pa. The men have been trapped for the last six days when a rush of coal sealed off the shaft in which they were working. (AP Wirephoto)

Fellin has said Bova was about 25 feet from him and Throne, behind a pile of debris. Several times he has reported Bova was injured slightly, but talking with him and Throne. Other times he has said Bova was out of touch only later to report Bova had been sleeping.

The rescue operations were initially two-pronged: (1) to drill the escape shaft to Fellin and Throne and (2) to place a second six-inch shaft in the area where Bova was reported. It took 22 hours to drill the first hole. The hole toward Bova was abandoned about 7 p.m.

Asked why, Gordon Smith, deputy state secretary of mines for the anthracite region, replied: "It's too deep."

By that he meant, he said, that the drill had gone past any possible area where Bova might be — based on the known depth of the mine at that point.

Smith said he was concerned about Bova's safety but there was no particular significance to the abandonment of the hole aimed at Bova's area. He said the drill apparently veered away, following rock strata.

About an hour before the Bova hole was abandoned, Fellin was asked again about Bova.

"I think he's on the other side of the debris," Fellin replied.

He did not volunteer any further information, nor did the rescue workers — who have expressed concern over the morale of men trapped so long underground — press him.

Experts said it may take 72 hours to a week to drill an escape hole large enough for the men to come out. They expressed concern over the possibility of new cave-ins. The three men were found late Sunday night.

"We're all okay!" shouted Fellin when the first voice contact was made shortly before midnight.

He told relieved families and rescuers they had kept themselves alive by drinking sulphurous water from a stream running through the mine.

"Since I've been drinking that stuff I have no more bellyaches," Fellin quipped.

Supplies Lowered

Soup, medical supplies, head lamps and even a requested cigar were lowered to them through the small pilot hole.

Relaxed now that contact with the outside world had been made, Fellin and his mates held up the projected drilling of an escape hatch while they took a nap.

Ralph Ditzler, district mine inspector, asked Fellin to tell him where to dig the planned 28-inch in diameter escape hole. "But he said, 'No, no. We've got to get some sleep before you start,'" Ditzler reported.

So, for hours the men napped below while rescue work came to a standstill.

When Fellin awakened he gave Ditzler and the others instructions where to dig. He told them not to worry about hitting him or Throne since they had about nine feet in which to maneuver.

Conversations with Fellin and Throne were carried on by a microphone dropped through a hole six inches in diameter, drilled from the surface. They reported talking with Bova.

Fellin and Throne were together, close to the bottom of the mine. Bova was about 25 feet away, separated from his fellow-miners by debris from the cave-in, which occurred at about the 200-foot level of the mine.

Slightly Injured

Fellin reported that Bova was slightly injured but in touch with the others. He said later he hadn't talked with Bova for hours, but presumed he was sleeping. Fellin later said Bova was in touch again.

Rescue crews tried to drill a similar six-inch communications hole directly to Bova's position.

The mine, of which Fellin is a co-owner, is at Shepton, about nine miles from Hazleton in the heart of the eastern Pennsylvania anthracite belt, and about 80 miles northwest of Philadelphia.

Fellin's stepson, Joseph Kline, was at the mine when the contact was made.

"I saw a man hollering near one of the holes. I thought maybe he had gone hysterical. I ran over to calm him down and next thing I could hear was my father's voice," he said.

Relatives of the trapped men kept a constant vigil, and it was through their faith and insistence to officials that the search was continued after experts were ready to quit.

The job now is to drill a hole about 28 inches in diameter which the trapped men can use as an escape hatch. It is a perilous job because of the possibility of a new cave-in while the drilling is underway. The six-inch hole took 22 hours.

Fellin told Ditzler that he and Throne planned to do some digging of their own in an effort to reach Bova through the debris that separated the men.

Microphone Contact

3 Buried Miners Drank Foul Water

HAZLETON, Pa. (AP)—The three men entombed for a week in a mine near here had only sulphurous water to drink—and no food. The unpalatable, foul-smelling water came from a stream running through the mine.

"Since I've been drinking that stuff I have no more bellyaches," quipped David Fellin, one of the three.

His comment—sulphurous water was an old-time remedy given youngsters as a spring tonic—was typical of the wry humor the men expressed in talks with rescue workers by way of a microphone lowered through a six-inch hole drilled into the section where they are trapped.

When the drill bit shot through into an obvious large chamber just before midnight Sunday night, the rescue crew pulled it back and shouted "Yo, Yo."

We're Okay

Back came the reply—from Fellin it later turned out:

"Who are you? We're all okay."

An electric light was lowered through the opening.

Gene Gibbons, a co-owner of the mine with Fellin, asked if they could see it.

"No," replied Fellin.

"We're all right," asked Gibbons.

"Behind some timber near a pipe," Fellin eventually worked his way to the light and was heard for the first time over a transistor microphone lowered on a wire and hooked to a loud speaker on the surface.

"Send us some soup," was his first comment. Then, laughing: "Send Hank (Henry) Throne a stogie."

How are the others, those above wanted to know.

It's Cold

"They're sleepy. Turn off the fan (used to send fresh air into the shaft). It's damn cold down here."

"We're not afraid of anything down here," Fellin went on. "Do any of you guys want to know what sulphur water tastes like?"

One of those above wanted to know what he thought it was.

"Monday."

"You're right," said the rescuer.

"My buddy (Throne) is wrong. He thought it was Tuesday. Tell Anna (Fellin's wife) I was asking about her. Tell her to make a big pot of soup, garlic soup."

At another point, when asked about another trapped miner, Louis Bova, Fellin said, "He's okay but he's hurt a little bit."

A little bit later Mrs. Fellin reached the site.

"Dave, Dave," she shouted. "How are you?"

"Okay," he replied.

"Are you sure? Can you hear me? Are you sick or hurt?"

"I can hear you hollering all over . . . No I'm not sick or hurt."

Shortly after the first contact with the men, Fellin's stepson, Joseph Kline, talked with Fellin.

"Hey Dad, how did you let yourself get in a fix like that?" asked 20-year-old Joe.

"It took me 58 years to learn I wasn't as smart as I thought I was," came the reply.

Ralph Ditzler, district mine inspector, tried to get Fellin to advise where to dig the escape hole.

"No, No," said Fellin. "We've got to get some sleep before you start."

Gov. George Wallace
Condemns Rights March

100 Picket Southern Governors

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, (AP)—About 100 civil rights demonstrators sang and marched Monday outside the luxury resort where 16 Southern state governors are holding their 25th annual meeting.

"It won't be a promise of an executive order banning racial discrimination from home state Gov. W. W. Barron, who told them in the gate he supports the Kennedy administration's civil rights bill.

The pickets, almost all Negroes, came to protest the segregation policies avowed by a majority of governors in the conference.

Barron, who later talked privately with demonstration leaders in his resort suite, said the only thing still to be decided on his order is how far it could go under West Virginia's Constitution and laws.

The demonstrators arrived to parade shortly after Mississippi's Gov. Ross Barnett proposed in a news conference that the nation's Negro population be redistributed in a 50-50 per cent white-Negro ratio in all states.

They did know, however, of Alabama Gov. George Wallace's announced intention to try to get the conference to pass several pro-segregation resolutions, including one to condemn the Aug. 28 civil rights march in Washington.

But Joint Chiefs Continue Support

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gen. Thomas S. Power, commander of the U.S. missile-bomber nuclear strike force was quoted as telling a Senate hearing Monday "it would be a great mistake" to ratify the limited nuclear test ban treaty.

It was the first such flat opposition to the pact by a high military officer and came after ratification was endorsed unanimously by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Power, chief of the Strategic Air Command, spoke in closed session shortly after his boss, Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, told a public Senate hearing that if the treaty were still in the proposed stage "I think I would recommend against it."

Chiefs Back Treaty

However, LeMay, Air Force chief of staff endorsed ratification along with the other members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff who appeared with him before members of three committees. Replying to questions, he said the situation would be different if the pact had not already been signed by the United States, Britain and Russia and other nations.

Sen. J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, told newsmen after a follow-up closed questioning of the top military command that LeMay expanded on this remark in that session.

"From the point of view of proponents of the treaty it was a clearer answer and I don't think he (LeMay) has any real reservations about the treaty over-all," Fulbright said. "He gave more force to his support for the treaty."

Fulbright reported also that opinions of the heads of the unified commands of which there are nine operating under the joint chiefs, were received at the closed session of his committee and members of the Senate Armed Services and Atomic Energy Committees.

Majority For Pact

"A very heavy majority supported the treaty," he said.

The majority did not include Power, who made his views known at a separate closed hearing on the treaty being conducted by the Senate Preparedness subcommittee.

The quotation "it would be a mistake to ratify this treaty" was passed on to newsmen by Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., who said he agrees with it. The general was said to have told the senators the pact "is not in the best interests of the United States."

The subcommittee's chairman, Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss, said Power testified "he had less confidence than others that the United States can or would maintain its present undisputed superiority in nuclear power if it ratified the treaty."

The Senator said he would have Power's testimony censured by the Pentagon and then made public. And Thurmond said he would suggest that Fulbright call Power before his hearing.

Another four-star air force general, Bernard A. Schriever, chief of the Air Force Systems Command, will testify before the subcommittee Tuesday, Stennis told newsmen.

Censored Version

Fulbright said a censored version of the secret testimony of LeMay and the other service chiefs will be made public later.

LeMay, in his public testimony, said political, rather than military, factors persuaded the joint chiefs to endorse unanimously the treaty to ban all nuclear tests except those underground.

Speaking with the three other four-star service chiefs seated beside him, he said the group had concluded "there are net disadvantages from the military standpoint if you consider nothing but that."

But, LeMay added, the group had decided these disadvantages were not so great they could not be accepted for possible gains in the political field if safeguards they specified are carried out.

Because his support of the treaty earlier had been pictured as lukewarm, LeMay was questioned more intensively than the chiefs of the Army, Navy and Marines.

Wheeler said that if the group had had the treaty text before its signing "so we could study it line by line. I think I would have come up with the same position—that the treaty would be acceptable."

Monroe County Faces School District Reorganization

(This is the first of two articles on the new school district reorganization act and how it may affect Monroe County. See related material in Pennsylvania Story on Page 4.)

By Robert Van Fleet
Chief, Ottawa News Service

STROUDSBURG — Residents and school leaders of 19 school districts in Monroe County have nine months in which to make a difficult decision on reorganizing their 692 square miles to meet demands of a new state law.

The new School Reorganization Act, passed in July by the General Assembly and signed by Gov. William W. Scranton, says that every one of the state's 67 counties must submit a plan of district reorganization by July 1, 1964, and that every plan must be in effect by July 1, 1965.

Any county that doesn't produce an acceptable plan will have the job done for it by the state.

The new act replaces — and softens — the controversial reorganizing act of 1961.

Single District Plan

Monroe County, heading the provisions of the 1961 law, had proceeded with the agonizing drafting of a plan that would have made the entire county a single school district. That program was approved by the State Council of Education on Dec. 12, 1962.

But it was never put into effect. Now, according to local school administrators and school board leaders, the county must begin again to draft a new plan.

Most of them predict that it will not be the same single-district program forged in 1962. More likely, it will be a four-district arrangement, established generally around the boundaries of the four currently operating administrative units:

1. Stroud Union.
2. East Stroudsburg Jointure.
3. Pocono Mountain Jointure.
4. Pleasant Valley Jointure.

The jointures — a cumbersome

Schedule For School District Reorganization

Pennsylvania's new school district act sets up the following schedule of events:

1. November 5, 1963—State standards for approving proposed county districting plans must be ready. The act requires that within 90 days of its signing by Gov. Scranton the State Board of Education must draft the rules.
2. July 1, 1964—On or before this date, every county board of school directors must submit a reorganization plan to the Department of Public Instruction at Harrisburg.
3. July 1, 1966—The deadline by which all county reorganizations must take effect. Any county that does not have a plan approved by the state at this time will be handed one drawn at Harrisburg.
4. July 1, 1964, or July 1, 1965—Dates on which new county plans may take effect in the event a county board can make early agreement. Theoretically, Monroe County's plan—whatever the county school directors decide it shall be—could take effect nine months from now in time for the 1964-65 school year.

alliance of small districts — are apparently destined to become as extinct as the mastodon.

Five of the county's six principal school administrators agree that the county must face up to the decision — and probably soon.

School Officials

They are John C. Litts, superintendent of Monroe County schools, and his assistant, Walter H. Sebring; Carl T. Seor, supervising principal at East Stroudsburg; Earl F. Groner, district superintendent of Stroud Union, and C. Willis Dunlap, supervising principal of Pocono Mountain.

None is inclined to discuss proposed plans for the record because they feel it is too soon after the adoption of the act for them to know all of its ramifications.

All, however, generally express support for the educational advantages the new act aims to achieve. In the course of seeking the edu-

Here is how the four operating school systems are constituted:

East Stroudsburg Joint

There are six component parts: East Stroudsburg Borough and the Townships of Porter and Lehman in Pike County and Smithfield, Middle Smithfield, and Price.

This produces 32 directors and perhaps 20 other officials to 2,300 pupils for an official-pupil ratio of about 48-1.

Pleasant Valley Joint

There are four components: Chestnut Hill, Polk, Ross, and (probably under the new act, Eldred) for a total of about 37 officials to 840 pupils, a ratio of 23-1.

Pocono Mountain Joint

There are eight components: The Borough of Mt. Pocono and the Townships of Barrett, Coolbaugh, Jackson, Paradise, Pocono, Tobyhanna, and Tunkhannock with a total of about 70 officials for 2,075 pupils, a 30-1 ratio.

Stroud Union

There are only about 10 comparable officials (directors, secretary, treasurer, collector) for a school population of 3,200, producing a ratio of 320-1.

In the face of such statistics, few professional educators find it possible to oppose the act's purpose of reducing the number of districts.

In the state there are about 2,251 districts (as of the end of 1961). State officials estimate that the total should be reduced to about 530 by the time the new county plans go into effect in 1965.

Propose Program For Sex Offenses

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Bar Association Sunday proposed a five-point program to help curb "repeater" sex offenses.

The measures were submitted in a report on sex crime and punishment by the association's subcommittee on sex offenses, which studied the problem for the last 10 months.

The report, released by bar association chancellor David Berger, proposed:

Stepped-up training of patrolmen, investigators, prosecutors, judges and prison guards in spotting sex offenders even when the crimes they commit are not those normally called sex offenses.

Full implementation of the Barr-Walker Act by creating psychiatric clinics for treating paroled and in-prison psychiatric and psychological services.

Mandatory preparation of presentence reports in all cases involving serious sex offenses against children.

Greater use of indefinite sentences to lend flexibility to "correctional" measures.

A period of "controlled or supervised release" similar to parole for all offenders leaving prison, even those completing maximum sentences.

Obsolescence A State Ill

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Most of Pennsylvania's economic ills can be traced to obsolescence—"obsolescence in mill and mine, obsolescence in the municipality," Sen. Joseph S. Clark said Monday.

The Democratic senator, speaking at the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania League of Cities, asserted:

"Unless we are willing to deal with obsolescence in our environment, in our industry, in our educational system, in our methods of government, particularly at the state level, the economic ills of Pennsylvania cannot be cured."

Clark said, "We need an unwritten declaration of interdependence among all of us: cities large and small, as well as the Commonwealth and the government in Washington."

Speed Blamed For Fatal Wreck

HARRISBURG (AP) — A three-fatality wreck on the turnpike during the weekend was blamed by commission officials on excessive speed.

At the same time, they reaffirmed their faith in medial barriers as a preventive against cross-over accidents.

Three persons were killed when an automobile flipped over a steel barrier, two feet and three inches high. Two other persons were killed in an accident at a point where a steel barrier was in the process of being erected.

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP)—The Pennsylvania administration thought it had a good idea for publicizing the role of liquor taxes in education when it proposed decorating the price list of the state-operated liquor stores with a picture of an old-fashioned "Little Red Schoolhouse."

But the State Liquor Board wanted, instead, to plug state funds.

State Marks 5,000 Bridges Too Weak For Higher Limit

HARRISBURG (AP)—The state Highways Department raced on Monday to post about 5,000 bridges incapable of carrying a new 36-ton maximum truck weight limit.

The department said that of the more than 22,000 bridges on the state highways system, only 14,000 could handle the new maximum weight. Of the other 8,000, some 3,000 previously were posted against weights exceeding 15 tons. The remaining 5,000 bridges, a spokesman said, were capable of handling the old 60,000-pound weight limit, but not the new limit.

"Most of the bridges in this group of 5,000 are on routes not now used for heavy truck traffic," the highways department spokesman said. "They are on secondary routes."

He said all bridges on interstate highways—the main heavy truck routes—can handle the higher weight limits. Also, he noted, nearly all of the bridges on major approaches to the big cities are engineered for the higher weights.

State-Wide Survey

N. A. Staples, department chief engineer, said engineers are making a bridge-by-bridge survey across the state on unsafe structures and posting them immediately.

Sign shops in each of the 11 highways districts are putting out weight limit markers.

Also, the state's own sign shop has been alerted to turn out bridge weight limit signs on an overnight basis, if required, a spokesman said.

The problem of the unsafe bridges has been complicated by an apparent difference of interpretation of the new law rushed through the closing days of the legislature which boosted the maximum allowable weight from the previous 60,000 pounds to 73,280 pounds.

Some sections of the law specify an effective date of Sept. 1, which would give the highways department a margin of safety in posting bridges. But the last paragraph of the new law says it shall become effective immediately.

The Pennsylvania Motor Truck Association contended that means the increased weights are now legal, provided the individual truckers have their necessary licenses for various vehicles. The law was signed by Gov. Scranton Aug. 13.

Meanwhile, the Public Utility Commission indicated it is studying the possibility of asking utilities to post weight limits on highway bridges, passing over their facilities, where the utilities help pay for maintenance.

The Highways Department disclosed the bridge danger last week.

Two Teenagers Still In Serious Condition

EAST STROUDSBURG — Two of the three teenage survivors of a one-car accident which took the life of a 13-year-old Portland boy Sunday were reported in critical condition last night in Monroe County General Hospital.

Robert H. Van Why, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Van Why, was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital with a skull fracture and internal injuries.

Steven Smith, 13, of Mt. Bethel, who has a broken right arm and internal injuries, was listed as "very critical" by the hospital, while Larry Vogler, 16, of Bangor, RD 2, was listed as critical with a fractured skull.

The third occupant of the car, Larry Peters, 12, of Portland, was listed as in "guarded" condition. He has a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Junior Driver

State Police of the Stroudsburg barracks said Vogler, the driver, had a junior operator's license, which permitted him to drive until midnight. The accident occurred about 10 a.m. on the road from Camp William Penn to Marshalls Creek.

State Police said the car was traveling south on the road, Legislative Rt. 4507, apparently at excessive speed when it ran off the right side of the highway after negotiating a sharp curve.

The car crossed the road, smashed into a utility pole and came to rest on its right side between the pole and a stone.

The roof of the car was nearly flattened and members of the Marshalls Creek rescue squad worked for two hours to free one of the victims, troopers said.

Funeral Services

Funeral services for the Van Why boy will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Reed Funeral Home, Johnsonville.

The youth, of the Methodist faith, was an eighth grade pupil in the Bangor Area Joint Schools and was active in the Future Farmers of America.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by a brother, Raymond, at home; a sister, Mrs. Nancy Seas, of Mt. Bethel; his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Mamie Kreemer, of Portland, and his maternal grandfather, Alfred Black, of Belvidere, N.J.

5 Injured In Accident Near Fatal Crash Scene

MARSHALLS CREEK — Five young people were injured in a one-car accident at 3:30 p.m. yesterday on the road between William Penn Camp and Marshalls Creek, the same highway on which one person was fatally injured and three others seriously hurt in a one-car crash Sunday night.

State Police identified the driver in the latest accident as Robert J. Bell, 20, of 4th St., Long Island City, N. Y. He was treated at Monroe County General Hospital for head injuries and face cuts and released.

Richard O'Donnell, 17, also of Long Island City, was admitted to the hospital for treatment of a broken left arm.

Also treated and released were Theodore Lester, 20, of Long Island City, possible fracture of the right arm; Frank Moreno, 20, of Freeport, Long Island, cuts of the left arm; and Ronald Cavazzini, 18, of Long Island City, head cuts.

Troopers said the south-bound car ran off the right side of the highway, veered across the road and crashed into a tree and a barn on the property of Louise Congdon, of East Stroudsburg, RD 2.

Robert H. Van Why, 13, of Portland, was fatally injured in a crash on the road Sunday night when the car in which he was riding hit a utility pole.

Cancer, Heart Disease Curbs

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — The fullest application of preventive knowledge could go a long way toward curbing chronic diseases like cancer and heart ailments, the 12th annual state Health Conference was told Monday.

Dr. David E. Price, a deputy surgeon general of the U. S. Public Health Service, said more is being learned each year, "But the application of what is already known could strikingly reduce the potentially harmful effects of air pollution, water pollution, radiation, and other environmental challenges."

At a workshop on social work, the executive director of the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis and Health Society called for a new national attitude on the training of professional and technical personnel.

The director, R. Winfield Smith, said that an adequate supply of trained people is a national necessity. The nation must somehow find a way to pay for it, he added.

Dr. Walter I. Buckert, medical director of Geisinger Medical Center at Danville, called on more women to enter the medical profession as a career, easing the doctor shortage.

SEARCH FOR BODY—Members of the Telford diving units are shown searching Penn-Bangor Quarry at Wind Gap for the body of Robert LeMunyon, 16-year-old Elizabeth, N. J. scuba diver who apparently drowned Sunday while diving in the abandoned pit. In background are trucks used by the unit to carry its equipment and one from the North Penn Goodwill Service, which furnished coffee and sandwiches for the searchers.

Rescue Squad Continues Search For Drowned Diver

WIND GAP — Searchers will attempt again today to recover the body of Robert LeMunyon, 16, of Elizabeth, N.J., who drowned in Penn-Bangor Quarry Sunday while skin diving.

Recovery efforts were called off Sunday night after air line trouble developed in equipment operated by diving units summoned to the scene.

The Telford, N.J., diving unit, resumed the search at 6 p.m. Monday. It was called off again after nightfall.

The searchers were being hampered by the coldness of the water. Henry Suida, captain of the Telford unit, said the water temperature at the 100-foot mark varies between 28 and 30 degrees.

He said, the divers are wearing "wet" suits, which permit some water between the suit and the diver and the heat from the diver's body warms this water and keeps them from freezing.

Paul Haas, a member of the Telford unit, said the divers were working at the 150-foot level Sunday and that two compressors couldn't pump enough air to the divers.

"We are too far from the edge of the water. It's about a hundred feet from here (the truck carrying the compressors) to the water," he said.

Norman Overholt, also a member of the unit, said the divers are working with grappling hooks at the 100-foot level.

Suida said the six teams of two men each are in the water about 20 minutes each, including the trip down to the 100-foot level, working and the return trip.

A member of the unit, who declined to be quoted by name, said last night he has reached the 200-foot level in the quarry and said he will try for it today if the body is not found before then.

Gus Verona, Northampton County representative in the General Assembly, said last night he has received Bureau of Mines approval to pump the quarry if necessary.

He said the pumps will be brought to the quarry when a formal request is made by local authorities. The formal request is expected as soon as the problem of what to do with the water pumped from the quarry is solved. They can handle, respectively, 4,000 and 7,500 gallons a minute.

State police said LeMunyon was skin diving with two companions and entered the water about noon Sunday with Peter LeWald or Linden, N.J., with a line consisting of 100-foot and 80-foot lengths of rope tied together with an inner tube as a buoy.

LeWald told police that when he and LeMunyon were about 100 feet below the surface, they decided to come up and pulled on the rope to signal Larry Butler, a skin diver in the boat from which they were operating.

LeWald said the rope separated at the knot, leaving the divers without contact with the surface. LeWald said he glanced at LeMunyon and saw that his mouthpiece was not in place. When he approached to offer assistance LeMunyon panicked and grabbed him so tightly he began to feel dizzy, LeWald said.

He said he broke his companion's grip and made his way to the surface where he collapsed in the boat in a state of shock.

Butler immediately strapped on his air tanks and attempted to reach LeMunyon, but could find no trace of him.

Six other skin divers in the quarry at the time also attempted to locate him, but were unable to do so.

The divers, Frank Prozinano, Ronald McClellan, Robert Simonski, Nauman Wilkinson and Harry Benz, all of Philadelphia, and Warren Bossick of Jersey City, made a quick search along the shores of the quarry, but could not dive into the deepest parts.

Police Chief Leo Reinhart of Wind Gap called the Telford diving unit, the Souderton Good Will

City Dams Make 19 Water Releases

MILFORD — Water stored in reservoirs and intended for consumption by New York City was released into the Delaware River 11 times during the first three weeks of August to maintain minimum flow in the stream.

Robert Fish, Delaware river-master in Milford said there were a total of 19 releases during the month, eight of which were not ordered by his office. These so-called "conservation releases" are made automatically by employees at the reservoirs.

Fish said the normal legal minimum flow of the river at Milford is 1,525 cubic feet a second. It is increased on June 15 of each year because of increased consumption in New York City.

"This year the rate was increased to 1,721 cubic feet per second. This means that when a measurement is taken and the rate of flow is below the normal a request is made for water stored in reservoirs for use in New York City, to be dumped back into the river to bring the flow up to normal. This is done for a 24 hour period," Fish explained.

August Releases

The releases requested by the rivermaster, for the month of August, are as follows:

Aug. 1, 161 cubic feet per second; Aug. 8, 185 c.f.s.; Aug. 9, 280 c.f.s.; Aug. 10, 277 c.f.s.; Aug. 12, 217 c.f.s.; Aug. 14, 473 c.f.s.; Aug. 15, 510 c.f.s.; Aug. 16, 143 c.f.s.; Aug. 17, 331 c.f.s.; Aug. 18, 730 c.f.s., and Aug. 19, 726 c.f.s.

On Aug. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 11, and 13 conservation releases of 34 c.f.s. were made without order from the rivermaster.

Fish said, "During the summer months when this office does not make a request for a release the men at the reservoirs automatically make this release. This is an agreement made when the project was planned. It is to benefit the fish in the river."

He added, "The releases made this year are comparatively lower than last year. For example on Aug. 1, 1962, our request was for 1,024 c.f.s. This year it was 161 c.f.s. Then on Aug. 19, 1962 the release request was for 973 c.f.s. and was slightly higher than this year's 726 c.f.s."

Questioned as to when the highway under construction from Saylorsburg to Stroudsburg and Snyder'sville to Bartonsville would be opened to traffic, Sincavage replied, "We have no date set for the opening of these sections."

Pilot Escapes Injury In Flip At Blakeslee

BLAKESLEE CORNERS — The pilot of a single engine Swift airplane escaped injury when the craft flipped over as he made an emergency landing on the Blakeslee Driving Range at 8:05 last night.

State Police at Fern Ridge identified him as Fred Heydenreich, 34, of Millville. They said he told them he was "boxed in" by weather on a flight from Matamoras, Pa., to Milton.

Heydenreich's plane was considerably damaged. A State Police aeronautical investigator from Wyoming will check the craft this morning.

Troopers said the landing was made on what was formerly an airport, but is now a golf driving range. They said the plane apparently struck something after its wheels touched, causing it to flip over.

Heydenreich returned to his home late last night with friends who picked him up.

Crash Leads To Charge Of Larceny

STROUDSBURG — William S. Kovatch, 23, of 636 Adams Ave., Scranton, is in Monroe County Jail in default of $500 bail on a charge of motor vehicle larceny as the result of a one-car accident about 12:15 a.m. Sunday.

State Police of the local barracks said Kovatch fled the crash scene in a pickup truck owned by George Dennis, Stroudsburg, RD 3, which was recovered in Scranton.

Kovatch pleaded guilty to the charge at a hearing before Mrs. Ruth E. Miller, Stroud Township justice of the peace.

Bernard Balendy, 17, of Scranton, the driver of the car, was committed to juvenile quarters of Monroe County Jail overnight and was turned over to Scranton authorities yesterday.

Two sisters, passengers in the car, were reported in satisfactory condition yesterday in the General Hospital of Monroe County. They are Malinda O'Connor, 30, and her sister, Catherine, 16, both of Scranton. The hospital did not make public their injuries.

School Reorganization In Monroe County

The new school reorganization act presents an opportunity and probably the necessity for Monroe County to reduce its 19 school districts down to four school districts.

The new law, although much weaker than the controversial 1961 Act 561, has enough teeth in it to force Monroe County into a four district plan. But the necessity for and the exact type of reorganization depends in the last analysis on how vigorously the new law is carried out by the State Department of Public Education.

In brief the law states that by July 1, 1964, every county board of school directors must submit a plan for county school reorganization to Harrisburg.

That plan cannot be any weaker than the 1953 plan of reorganization for Monroe County which called for four school districts but has still not been put into effect.

On July 1, 1966, any county which does not have a plan of reorganization approved will have one handed to it by the state.

If the five-man Monroe County board of school directors draws up its own plan, and if that plan is approved in Harrisburg, it can take effect on either July 1, 1964, or July 1, 1965.

It appears almost certain that the minimum Monroe County reorganization the state will settle for is the 1953 plan for four districts.

That makes sense and can be accomplished with a minimum of dislocation, because the three jointures of East Stroudsburg, Pocono Mountains and Pleasant Valley can be merged into three single districts. Stroud Union already is a single district produced by union of four formerly separate districts.

Monroe County's four school districts would look like the map published today on page one, with the first of two special articles by Robert Van Fleet, chief of the Ottaway News Service.

Van Fleet studied the new law, and discussed it with top education department officials in Harrisburg, and with the school administrators of Monroe County.

His article points out some of the main reasons for reduction of the 19 school districts in Monroe County to four.

A great deal of time, money and book keeping is wasted by the repetition of school business at the jointure and individual school district level.

There are 175 school officials—directors, treasurers, secretaries, tax collectors, auditors—in Monroe County who are private citizens. That doesn't include school teachers and administrators.

Many of them are paid money that should be spent directly for education instead of redundant administration.

The union school district, which the three new school districts would parallel, not only gets $800 instead of $500 per teaching unit state aid paid to jointures. It also enjoys a more simple and efficient school board organization.

There is the carrot of local school board efficiency and also the stick of state law present in this reorganization situation.

The stick is held by state education officials in Harrisburg, who, if we do not propose at least a reduction to four school districts, may insist on the 1961 plan which would make Monroe County one large school district.

Monroe County would be wise to submit a four-district plan in order to defend itself against a single district plan which would be much less palatable.

The Will To Live

The discovery of three miners buried alive for almost a week in a mine in Hazleton was brought about because of the insistent of their relatives that the men must have found a place to hide during a cave-in and must still be alive.

The expert rescue squads were ready to quit, but wives and children insisted that they continue their efforts.

Then Sunday, voice contact was made through a drilled hole and food and supplies—including a cigar—were lowered to the men.

They are not out yet, but an escape hole is in the making, and their ultimate rescue seems assured. Their courage and the courage of their relatives who refused to give up is a stirring example of the will to live and the power of family love.

High Level Euphoria

WASHINGTON — When I was covering night police, some little time ago, the detectives of the narcotics squad brought in an addict. They wanted to know where the junky had gotten the smack, but they knew it would be useless to question him then. As one of the fuzz explained it to me:

"There's no use trying to break down this hophead now. He just had a fix before we apprehended him and feels too good. He's in what the docs call a state of euphoria."

The next I heard of "euphoria" was from Harry J. Anslinger, just before he retired as U. S. Commissioner of Narcotics a couple of years ago.

"The reason it's so hard for an addict to kick the habit," said Mr. Anslinger, "is that he misses the euphoria."

Thus the idea was implanted in my head that "euphoria" had only to do with junkies. It came as an eye-opener to me then to hear it kicked around, in this order, by (1) Secretary of State Dean Rusk; (2) Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara; (3) Atomic Energy Commission Chairman Glenn T. Seaborg; (4) Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor.

Rusk, McNamara, Seaborg, and Taylor all dragged "euphoria" into their testimony on behalf of the nuclear test ban treaty as if they'd been ordered to sneak it in somehow. Each in turn told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the "treaty is acceptable if Americans don't succumb to euphoria."

I was pretty sure they weren't warning that all Americans are in danger of becoming docile fiends, but Senator George D. Aiken of Vermont didn't seem so assured. When Gen. Taylor, the last of the euphorians, got off his euphoria, Senator Aiken began snapping his fingers madly for a page.

He commanded the kid to fetch him a dictionary. Senator Aiken looked up "euphoria," with Senator Thomas H. Kuchel of California looking over his shoulder. I expected either one or the other to go after Gen. Taylor on "euphoria," but instead they got up and left the hearing. I raced after them.

"I thought it was time to quit," Senator Aiken told me. "The dictionary defines euphoria as 'a sense of well-being and buoyancy.' I didn't want to ask Gen. Taylor if he was against Americans feeling well and buoyant."

"I'm glad I read the definition," cut in Senator Kuchel. "When they said 'euphoria,' I thought they were asking me, 'You for it?'"

We were joined at this juncture by ultra-dignified Senator Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts. I inquired as to his familiarity with "euphoria."

"I don't know what it means," confessed Senator Saltonstall solemnly. "But then, of course, I'm only a Harvard man."

I returned to the hearing in time to hear Senator Richard B. Russell of Georgia remark to Gen. Taylor:

"We'll be having euphoria all around us from now on. It'll join up with words like 'extrapolation.'"

I glanced around the chamber and beheld a number of euphoric faces. Harold Stassen sat beaming among the spectators. Childs Harold looked as if he might be getting the dope for all those Republican Presidential primaries he threatens to run in. If he does, either he, or we, will need euphoria.

Constance Bennett, the movie actress, was in the same row as Childs Harold. But her look of buoyancy changed to one of puzzlement when Senator Carl Curtis of Nebraska asked Gen. Taylor a hypothetical question involving blowing up mountain passes to protect India from invasion by Red China.

Senator Curtis wanted to know if we could blow up the Himalayas without its being considered an act of war. Gen. Taylor replied, in substance, that it would be considered unfriendly.

A reporter at the press table with me growled: "Whoever thought of blowing up the Himalayas? It would put all the Sherpas out of work."

"It wouldn't be good for the Abominable Snowman either," observed a colleague. "If Mount Everest were flattened, the Yeti would sure lose his euphoria."

Atomic power is being installed by many utilities in various parts of the country and before long it is to be anticipated that this will be used exclusively. That throws out the electrical power excuse.

Water supply: Here we have another prospective dud. At the moment desalination is being used successfully in the state of Israel. Again we may anticipate that within a short time this method of obtaining water will be used extensively in the great seaboard cities. That disposes of this excuse.

Recreational uses: At the moment hundreds of thousands of people in search of recreation are using the Poconos for that purpose. The dam would destroy not only many of these resorts but also flood out many of the activities which vacationers are using in the Poconos.

As the situation is, traffic conditions along Route 209 and elsewhere in the region have reached the stage of severe congestion and worse is to be expected.

If the seven million people in a ten week season should show up, as the pro-damners claim, it would be necessary to construct a network of roads into the district which would cost millions upon millions of dollars with increased taxes and no end to costs in sight.

Mr. Dressler's mathematics: He claims the dam would cost two-hundred million. Where he gets this figure is a mystery. We anti-damners claim there will be two-billion; let him disprove our contention.

We concede that Mr. Dressler has the right to eat and to hold his job with the Water Resources Association. As such he has to be their mouthpiece. We do not concede, however, that he has a right to try to take away land from us against our wishes and we intend to fight this matter to prevent his doing so.

The irony of the whole situation is that Mr. Dressler took his visitors on a tour of the very farms which he wants to inundate under sixty feet of water. To us this is an incredible affront.

'At Least It Got The Profumo Case Off The Front Page'

The Pennsylvania Story

By Mason Denison
Harrisburg — Is a local school board "absolute" — the final answer?

In most instances—yes; there is virtually no route of appeal (except in some cases through the courts). However this isn't always the case. Here is the way one group of citizens, dissatisfied with their school board decision, has decided to move (without the tedious process of trying to vote board members out of "office").

The move itself is somewhat unique in the annals of Pennsylvania school history. Officials of the State Department of Public Instruction say they cannot recall a similar incident developing, at least not in contemporary times.

The locale is Luzerne County, more specifically Butler Township, "cool district just outside the City of Hazleton."

What has happened is this: The Butler Township School Board in June declined to go along with a taxpayer petition to have placed on the November ballot the question of whether the Butler school district should form a union school district with the other three districts in the area.

(Meanwhile school boards of the other three districts of the proposed union had already agreed to have the union question placed on the November ballot.)

The Butler Township School Board refused theoretically to "d the matter then and there. (School board said it wanted more time to develop "more specific information on costs.")

By this time nettled and irate residents decided to take matters into their own hands—and bypass their local school board! This is how they've done it:

Under the Pennsylvania School Code, the question of becoming part of a union district actually can be placed on the ballot providing at least 25 per cent of the registered voters in the district petition for a referendum — if school board doesn't act.

Butler Township has a registered voter list of 1479, thus to meet the 25 per cent requirement that petition would necessarily have to have 370 signatures.

However when the petition was finally presented, it wound up with 245 more signatures than necessary!

Under the circumstances it would seem the school board in this case was opposing rather than supporting the will of the people it represents.)

Interestingly too, the petition has drawn the approval of the Department of Public Instruction.

Unquestionably too, similar circumstances have developed in other areas of the state — but with the question of "what next" unfortunately perhaps, remaining unanswered and therefore not acted upon.

The Luzerne County case is different — and will be quite interesting to watch.

The Allen-Scott Report

Reds In Cuba

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington, August 20—Intelligence authorities are trying to figure out what is at the bottom of two baffling developments in Communist-ruled Cuba.

So far no concrete conclusions have been reached on the following:

First—the unpublishable visit of Marshal Liu Ya-lou, deputy defense minister and commander of the Red Chinese air force. While the rigidly controlled press and radio have maintained drum-tight silence about him, he has been elaborately winned and dined.

Deputy Armed Forces Minister Balermio Castilla Maz has been Liu's constant companion; Dictator Castro has had long conferences with him; and he has met every other top Cuban leader. A number of the military have lavishly entertained him.

Surprisingly, and most significant in view of the furious public wrangling between Moscow and Peking, the six or eight Russian generals in Cuba have gone out of their way to be friendly to the visiting Chinese air marshal. They have cordially shown him some of their troop camps, extensive anti-aircraft defenses and other installations, and given every appearance of being on friendly terms.

From all outward signs, as far as Liu and these Soviet generals are concerned everything is peaceful and harmonious between their violently feuding Communist governments.

Another mystery is what's behind Liu's trip.

Manifestly, he couldn't have come unless he had been officially invited. Yet Castro and his puppet regime are completely dependent on Russia. Militarily and economically he couldn't exist for a month without the Soviet's troops and daily shipments of oil, food, clothing, industrial and other essential equipment and supplies.

The bombastic Cuban dictator can't afford to offend the Kremlin—much as he might like to. He is wholly dependent on it to stay in power, and he is taking orders whether he likes it or not.

So how come Liu's visit, and the red-carpet treatment he has been getting — from both the Cubans and the Russian general?

Another Puzzler — Second baffling development is the unannounced return of Anibal Escalante, veteran Moscow-trained Communist whom Castro expelled from Cuba in March 1963 after loudly denouncing him a "deviationist" and organizer and leader of a "sectarian conspiracy."

Escalante went to Moscow, where he appeared well taken care of. During Castro's visit there last spring, Escalante mingled freely with members of his entourage.

As in Liu's instance, Escalante couldn't go to Cuba without official permission. His unpublishable return can only mean he is back in good graces again.

Why a how is conjectural. One Havana report is that a purge of Castro's regime is in the making, and that Escalante, a hard-core Communist with extensive experience in this line, is to do the job.

Whether Castro himself is to be one of the victims is an intriguing idea.

According to another account, Escalante was sent back by Moscow to arrange the puppet Castro regime's adherence to the Warsaw military alliance.

French intelligence is the source of this information. The French are claiming that in the recent discussions between Premier Khrushchev and Secretary Rusk, the Kremlin ruler offered to withdraw the bulk of Soviet forces in Cuba in exchange for a non-aggression agreement between the NATO and Warsaw alliances.

Such a deal would mean the U. S. would have to persuade its allies to go along on that.

According to the French, Rusk said he would relay the proposition to President Kennedy.

Cuban Flasher — To combat increasing sabotage, Castro has created a new agency titled "Office for the Protection of Production." Its purpose is to safeguard industries, farms, livestock and storage centers. The agency is under the Ministry of Interior and is headed by an old-line Communist police official. . . . Registration in Havana for new ration books has finally been completed. Upwards of 40,000 "family groups" were registered, and "presumably have received the new ration cards. . . .

Courses in Russian have been made compulsory in Cuban universities. Every student has to take a language course. . . . Because so many doctors have fled Cuba, the East European satellites are sending medical teams there to cope with the growing health problem. Latest to arrive is a team of 20 so-called "specialists" from Czechoslovakia. They also brought hospital equipment, drugs and other medical supplies.

Representative Melvin Laird, R-Wis., is demanding that the President crack down on beneficiaries of U. S. foreign aid who are trading with Cuba. He charges "countries that receive aid from the U. S. in fiscal 1963 have in turn carried on trade with Communist Cuba." Also that in 1962, 27 countries "whose trade with Cuba amounted to over $2 million received economic or military aid from the U. S." Laird contends this is in direct violation of two provisions of the law, and that the administration is derelict in not enforcing them.

All pools should be surrounded by a protective fence with a self-locking door to keep out wandering toddlers, yours or your neighbor's. Constant vigilance supplies the greatest protection for small children.

Pools should be equipped with a long bamboo pole and a life preserver — for emergencies only, not for water play.

When private pools adopt the strict precautionary rules of large public pools all the advantages of safety will be incorporated into the fun of swimming at home.

Swimming pools have passed from a status symbol of luxury to a household necessity in many parts of the United States. In countless communities, the swimming pool is as much a part of the planning of the home as is the refrigerator or the garage. Family activities center around the pool. Yet the unsupervised swimming pool is a potential danger to the entire family.

The it - cannot-happen-to-us frame of mind about pool tragedies is an erroneous one. Accidents have remarkable ways of happening when the protective guards of security are even momentarily relaxed.

One swimming safety rule, if strictly adhered to by both adults and children can avoid tragedy. The rule is this: No one should ever swim alone.

This rule must apply to good swimmers and even to those who are just taking a quick dip to "cool off."

Inflated mattresses and waist supports are not substitutes for constant attention or knowing how to swim.

A heavy floating rope that indicates change of depth from shallow to deep water is an excellent safeguard. This marker should not be used for play.

Speaking Of Your Health:

What Causes Drownings?

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

During the summer months newspapers often report the drowning of an athletic young man, a capable swimmer in apparent good health.

For years, these strange drownings of young, virile adults have been unsatisfactorily explained, vaguely dismissed as being the result of cramps, heart attacks or panic.

Lab Work
Recently there has been more than just speculation about the causes of these bizarre accidents. Physiologists have tried to reproduce in laboratories the factors that might be responsible.

Out of the maze of complicated tests came an enlightening revelation. These scientists concluded that there was real danger when the breath was held for an unusually long period under water.

Their studies showed that momentary episodes of unconsciousness can occur if breathing is deliberately controlled beyond one's usual endurance. They surmise that these momentary lapses of consciousness can lead to panic and drowning, even when the swimmer is experienced.

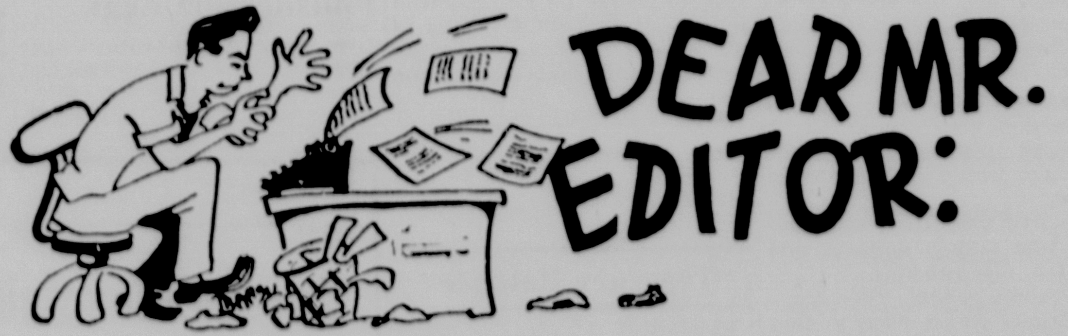

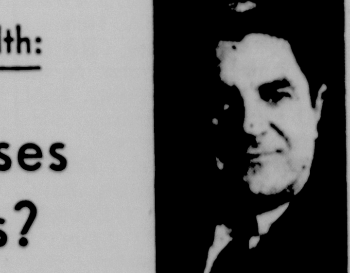

Another Cause
Another cause of drowning that has been given little or no recognition occurs to swimmers who are known to have chronic infections of the ears, with perforation of the eardrums.

Cold water, under pressure of deep diving or swimming, may produce dizziness. When the cold water enters the middle ear through the perforation, it may induce a sudden attack of vertigo, or dizziness.

Anyone who has any unusual condition of the ears, such as chronic infection or chronic discharge, should take extra precautions while swimming.

Anti-Dam Committee Debates Dressler Speech

Editor, The Daily Record:

The Record reports on a sizable piece of malarky handed out by Mr. Frank W. Dressler, of the Water Resources Association of the Delaware River Basin, at Pardee's Beach.

He reported to the same old clichés and evidenced that when it comes to anticipating the cost of Tocks Island Dam that he must be a poor mathematician.

Mr. Dressler stated that the four major purposes of the dam are flood control, generation of electrical power, water supply, and recreational uses.

Flood control: He said in answer to a question that the dam would offer no flood control, and he stated definitely, that the only way flood control could be obtained would be by damming the various streams that feed into the Delaware.

If this is done, there would be no purpose at all in building the big dam. Consequently, flood control as a reason for building Tocks is nix.

Generation of electrical power: This is another outworn excuse. Within the past few weeks National Observer, a weekly newspaper, reported on the happening in Hallam, Nebraska.

There a power generating plant had been consuming forty tons of coal an hour. By installing atomic energy in place of the coal all of this was eliminated and power is being produced at a much lower cost.

Atomic power is being installed by many utilities in various parts of the country and before long it is to be anticipated that this will be used exclusively. That throws out the electrical power excuse.

Water supply: Here we have another prospective dud. At the moment desalination is being used successfully in the state of Israel. Again we may anticipate that within a short time this method of obtaining water will be used extensively in the great seaboard cities. That disposes of this excuse.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

"But Why?"; that's the second question everybody asks after I've answered the first one: "What in the world is a bridge safari?" A bridge safari is a compatible foursome going to somebody's house and playing bridge all weekend. And I mean all weekend.

This one was a particularly successful one, starting after work at 10 p.m. on Friday night and lasting until midnight Sunday night. Of that time 35 hours were spent actually playing bridge as hard as we could; 26 rubbers and 150 hands.

Statistics don't answer the "why?" unless you love bridge with a passion. Teenagers might have a hard time explaining why they have slumber parties where nobody sleeps; men who don't even like to eat fish let alone clean them why they go fishing; women who hate to hike why they can happily walk ten miles window-shopping in the city.

It's fun. It's unnecessary, and the fund of hilarious memories can cheer you through months of useful work-a-day routine. I'll never hear the Blackwood convention of four-no-trump without a rumble of laughter at the memory of hearing it at 6 a.m., closing my eyes to concentrate on how to show my aces, and waking up an undetermined number of minutes later to meet three pairs of puzzled eyes wondering why under the sun it was taking me so long to count up to two.

The early mist rising over the lake of a Saturday morning, the wind-driven whitecaps of a Saturday night rain on the roof, the feeling of the sun on your back on a Sunday afternoon. The smell of chickens roasting on an outdoor spit while taking the dummy's turn at basting them. The solid comfort of a roast beef dinner at 10 o'clock at night.

The warm knowledge that there are at least three people in the world who can stand up to the combat of the bridge table, the lack of sleep and privacy, with make-up wearing off and clothes getting rumpled, who can still be counted as friends and good company. That's why.

Listing What You Like About Job You Don't, Helps

By Roberta Fleming Roesch

"It's all right to say 'I don't like your job, leave it,'" a woman attending a job forum said the other day.

"But if you're absolutely stuck in a job you don't like and can't leave because of personal or other reasons what can you do to help yourself live with it?"

Some Do, Some Don't

That's a good question — we think — because at the same time we run into people enchanted with their work, we also cross the paths of people who are disenchanted with their jobs.

For the latter we have an approach that's as childish as it is Pollyannaish. But for many people it works.

Make a list of the good things about your present job. For example, what do you gain by having it that you wouldn't have if you lost it? (Almost any job looks better if you think there's a chance you'll lose it.)

What Advantages?

Also, what advantages does your present job offer that people whose jobs you envy may envy about yours? How many good things can you really dig up when you give objective answers?

"The whole process is an eye opener as well as therapy," says a secretary who describes herself as a cynic who tried the idea. "And none of your sophisticated friends have to know you play this game with yourself if you feel foolish playing it even in front of yourself!"

No Advancement

"I don't really like working in a small town bank where there's no place to advance," she admitted. "And sometimes I get terribly frustrated that I'm in this spot instead of a big career job in a city. My earlier ambitions were always aimed in that direction."

"But because of family problems working any distance from home is out of the question for the present. And because of financial problems not working is completely out of the question, too."

"Consequently, here I am — stuck where I don't want to be, but stuck anyhow. That's why I make use of your list idea when I get completely frustrated."

Typical lists for her, the secretary explained, run something like this.

Has A Family

(1) I have a home-and-family side to my life that I'd never have had if I'd pursued my ambitions according to my first plans.

(2) Even though I'm not doing exactly what I want to do this job enables me to talk to a lot of local people every day and have an outside interest.

Ticket Sales Open Here For Philadelphia Symphony Pocono Concert, Sept. 13

East Stroudsburg—Tickets for the Philadelphia Orchestra under the direction of Eugene Ormandy to be held in the East Stroudsburg High School auditorium on Friday, Sept. 13, will go on sale tomorrow.

The concert is a sort of test run to establish whether or not the people of the area will respond to the possibility of having a full-scale Summer Musical Festival in the Poconos, similar to the successful festival at Tanglewood in the Berkshires. It is being sponsored by the Pocono Art Center, which has mobilized other civic groups in the community.

The majority of tickets are priced at $7.50. There are a limited number at $5, and patron tickets priced at $12.50.

The patrons are invited to a reception to be held following the ceremony with Ormandy himself as the guest of honor, and other members of the orchestra invited.

Reservations may be made by telephoning the Art Center, 421-5988 from 10 to 4 p.m., except on Sunday, and checks for the tickets may be sent to the Pocono Art Center, 54 East Brown St., East Stroudsburg. The money is considered a donation and is deductible for tax purposes.

The opportunity to present the concert here because of the open date on the Philadelphia Symphony's schedule was about to go by default until the Art Center agreed to take the responsibility. However, they are seeking the cooperation of the whole community, not only financially, but also in proving that the orchestra would be a welcome addition to the Pocono scene.

Committees have been mobilized to assist in what might be termed a "crash program" within the limited time left.

Mrs. Frank L. Patterson, Jr. is serving as chairman of the Woman's Symphony Committee which includes Mrs. James Ottaway, Mrs. Fred Waring, Mrs. Frederick D. Trumbauer, Mrs. H.

Berton George and Mrs. Clement Cleveland.

The program committee is headed by Mrs. E. H. Wyckoff, Jr., and includes Mrs. John Wolfe, Mrs. David Harrison, Mrs. John Ferrebee, Mrs. N. D. Lambert and Mrs. Jules Steinberg.

Serving on the ticket committee are Mrs. Frank Butler, chairman; Mrs. John Britton, Mrs. Albert Koster, Mrs. William Collins, Mrs. Larry Green, Mrs. George Stabenow, Jacob Wachtman, Mrs. S. or Pullen, Mrs. Henry Reader, and Mrs. Tom Breslau.

Members of the Junior Woman's Club of the Stroudsburgs, of which Mrs. Paul Edinger is president, will serve as ushers. Floral decorations will be provided by the Monroe County Garden Club of which Mrs. George Rung is president.

Serving as musical host will be Robert Zellener of East Stroudsburg Area Joint High School.

The Senior Woman's Club of which Mrs. Edmund Strickland is president have taken the responsibility for providing refreshments for the reception of patrons and orchestra following the concert.

Other officers elected were Mrs. Ruth Smith, vice president, and Mrs. Beverly Palmer, secretary.

In other business, final plans for the rummage sale on Thursday and the combination rummage and bake sale on Friday were completed.

The sale will be held in the former Butz Store, next to the East Stroudsburg A&P, on both days during the hours of 5 and 9 p.m.

Rev. Arthur K. Wilson performed the ceremony with Miss Barbara Sleep as organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of silk Organza and Alencon lace, re-embroidered with pearls. The bell-shaped skirt ended in a chapel train. A crown of lace held her fingertip veil on imported illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of phalaenopsis and eucalyptus.

Miss Eunice Carol Miller of Bangor RD 2 as maid of honor wore a long gown of mint green taffeta with a matching Dior bow and carried a bouquet of salmon roses and yellow sweetheart roses.

James Kressler of 220 Folk St., Easton served as best man. Ushers were James Chiesi of Easton and Carlton Krause of Rochester, N.Y.

A reception was held in the social room of the church before Mr. and Mrs. Kressler left for a wedding trip through New York State.

They will be at home at 33

South 14th St., Easton.

The bride, a graduate of Bangor Area High School, is employed at Blue Ridge Textile Co., Bangor.

A REAL "EYECATCHER" is this handsome Kingsize Bookcase Bed at Frederick Duckloe and Brothers in Portland, Pa. Measuring six feet six inches, this Early American styled bed is available in Solid Cherry or Pine with a choice of two box springs and mattresses or one large kingsize mattress. Need an odd size spring and-or mattress? Stop in and see Fred or Norman Duckloe and they'll help solve the problem. P. S. "The Brothers" tell us they also have "Queen Size" (five feet) in stock, too!

Hamill's Paint Center Has All Painting Needs

A SUCCESSFUL, long-lasting paint job on galvanized steel, which is widely used for gutters and downspouts, utility siding, roofs and signs, is dependent on using the proper primer and on correct surface preparation. The traditional washing of the metal with acids, vinegar or copper sulphate has largely been abandoned.

The most widely recommended primer for galvanized steel is known as zinc dust-zinc oxide paint, says Hamill's Paint Center, 37 So. Courtland St., East Stroudsburg. The top coat can be quality exterior paint compatible with the primer. The label for the latter will usually tell you what type of topcoat to use.

Be sure, however, that you use only quality zinc dust-zinc oxide and finish paints. Only quality paints are weather and wear resistant, have lasting hiding power and retain their color brilliance. To be sure that you are getting a quality product, consult Hamill's Paint Center.

Wherever possible, galvanized metal should be permitted to weather at least six months so that the coating applied in the mill to protect the sheets from being stained by moisture during shipment can oxidize away. The only surface preparation required for weathered galvanized metal is to brush off any surface dirt or scale and to remove any oil or grease films with mineral spirits or detergent and water. Be sure the surface is dry before you start to paint.

Zinc dust pigment is very heavy and has a greater tendency to settle to the bottom of the can than other pigments; it is therefore important to stir zinc dust-zinc oxide paint thoroughly before use.

The primer can be either brushed or sprayed on. If the metal is being painted only to prolong its life, only one coat of the zinc dust-zinc oxide paint need be applied when the original galvanized finish is about gone. Normally, a second coat will not be required for five to seven years. Be sure to remove any rust that has developed before repainting.

When galvanized steel is being painted for decorative purposes, the recommended primer is followed by a suitable topcoat after it has dried.

THE QUESTIONS people ask are sometimes more revealing than the answers they give to questions asked of them.

Those questions also can be surprising. Example: one of the most frequent queries directed at this department concerns the whys and wherefores of changing a washer to stop a faucet leak. Another involves the ravages of humidity, which always seems to be too high or too low. Questions about painting also are high on the list of favorites.

But month after month, year after year, it's money that appears to give readers the most concern. Which is only to be expected. If we all had limitless funds at our disposal, things like mortgages and the costs of remodeling and repainting would be the least of our worries—and questions about them would be unnecessary.

Three recent separate seminars on home ownership also found potential home buyers asking more questions about financing than any other phase of homeownership. The most frequent questions indicated a misunderstanding of what are generally called Federal Housing Administration loans. Actually, they aren't FHA loans at all, but FHA-insured loans. The government does not issue the mortgage. It merely guarantees the lending institution that it will not lose any money if you, the borrower, should default.

The advantages and disadvantages of a small down payment also produced many questions. The situation here is similar to any purchase made on the installment plan. The smaller the down payment, the more money the purchaser eventually pays.

Sears Is Ahead In New TV Era

SEARS, ROEBUCK and Co. is months ahead of schedule in heralding the new era of "all-channel" television, the company announced today.

As a service to the public, Sears said, all Silver-tone black-and-white TV sets now are available with all-channel tuners. In addition, all Silver-tone color sets are complete with all-channel tuners.

Under the federal "all-channel receiver" law passed last year, every new TV set shipped by manufacturers after April 30, 1964, must be the all-channel type. The law, designed to encourage establishment of more television stations across the nation, will require all new sets to be equipped with both UHF (ultra high frequency) and VHF (very high frequency) channels. This has the effect of adding 70 more channels to the 12 currently available on VHF sets.

The company pointed out that it is not offering "UHF-ready sets" because these "will involve unnecessary added expense to the public to convert to UHF reception." Such sets feature a "plug" for conversion, Sears said, but require the purchase of a UHF tuner and the services of a professional serviceman to install it.

For those who have a 12-channel (VHF) set or still plan to purchase one, Sears said it offers a choice of two easy-to-install UHF converters which will enable all existing sets to receive any of the 70 new channels which will enable all existing sets to receive any of the 70 new UHF channels.

For more information see Sears, Roebuck and Co., Main St., Stroudsburg.

Convertible Debenture

Q. I owned a convertible debenture which paid interest at 6 percent. I was pleased with this, because of the income it provided, even though I knew that I could have converted it into common stock of the same company at a nice profit over the price I paid for the debenture.

The debenture, of course, was in "bearer" form, with interest coupons attached. Purely by chance, I saw a small notice in the newspapers that the company had called its debenture for redemption.

Naturally, I converted the debenture into stock. If I hadn't it would have been quite costly to me, because the value of the stock I received was well above the price paid by the company for the debentures it called for redemptions.

Just suppose I didn't see that newspaper notice. What could I have done?

A. You could have kissed some money (the difference between the value of the stock you received when you converted and the "sell price" of the debenture) goodbye.

And you might have done just that—unless you were alerted to the call of the debenture—perhaps by a broker or bank through which you bought the debenture.

A debenture is a debt security—a method through which a company borrows money. Many debentures (like most debt securities) have "call provisions"—giving the issuing company the right to pay them off after certain periods of time.

If the debenture had been in registered form, your name would have appeared on the debenture and on the company's record books. The company would then have informed you and all other registered holders of the call. But you had your debenture in bearer form. So, it was most unlikely that the company had any way of knowing that you had the debenture.

These are the things you should know before you buy. Before you invest, always learn at least some of the ground rules.

Q. I have a few Series E, U.S. Savings Bonds, which matured four or five years ago. I understand, from reading your column, that they are still drawing interest. But a friend tells me I should cash them in and buy newer Series E bonds, which pay a higher interest rate. A young teller at the bank says that would be a mistake. He can I find out, for sure?

A. That young teller knows a whole lot more about Series E bonds than your friend. All Series E bonds outstanding (in the hands of the public) continue to draw interest.

It's important for you and many other people to know that each time the interest rate of E bonds has been raised, the interest rate on outstanding E bonds has also been raised.

This most certainly does get complicated. But E bonds now accumulate interest at the annual rate of 3 1/2 percent if held to maturity—first maturity, first extended maturity or second extended maturity. The way this works out, you would undoubtedly lose dollars by cashing the bonds you now hold and buying new ones.

Again, I'll suggest that anyone who wants to learn the current redemption values of individual E bonds he holds write to Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. Enclose 30 cents and ask for a copy of the booklet called "Tables of Redemption Values of U.S. Savings Bonds, Series A through E."

(Mr. Doyle will answer only representative letters of general interest in his column. He cannot answer phone queries.)

Playhouse To Benefit Workshop

CHERRY LANE — A plan to aid the Sheltered Workshop Fund in Monroe County was finalized yesterday, Jack Irwin, director of Cherry Lane Playhouse, said yesterday.

Under the plan 50 cents from each ticket purchased for plays for the remainder of the season will be donated to the fund if the person making the purchase makes it known at time of purchase that they are getting the tickets to aid the workshop.

Irwin added that this applies only to tickets purchased at the A. B. Wyckoff Store in Stroudsburg.

Reckless Driving Charged

STROUDSBURG — Herbert Raymond Smith, 18, of Henryville, RD 1, will be charged with reckless driving as a result of a one-car accident at 1:55 p.m. yesterday at Garfield and N. Second Sts.

Borough police said Smith's car, traveling at excessive speed, failed to negotiate a curve at the corner, struck two trees on the property of Edward Smith, 86 N. Second St., and continued three-quarters of the way down Second St. before coming to a stop.

Police said witnesses estimated his speed at up to 65 miles an hour. He was not hurt. Damage to the car was estimated at $300.

High School Football Camps In Pocono-Slate Belt Open

By KEN O'BRIEN
Daily Record Sports Editor
HIGH SCHOOL football camps in the Poconos and the Slate Belt were officially opened yesterday with initial practice sessions getting underway for the rapidly approaching 1963 grid campaign.

Many of the schools open the season Sept. 14. Plus X of Roseto jumps the gun in the Daily Record coverage area with a Sept. 13 opener at Bristol.

Two new coaches take over the reins at two of the area schools—Wayne Boyd at Pocono Mountain Joint High School, and Andrew Mocony at Bangor. Boyd succeeds Allen Shollenberger in a vast coaching realignment at Pocono Mountain, while Mocony becomes the new head mentor at Bangor following the death last year of Richard Forster.

Varsity Level
Another change in the area is the start of varsity competition this year for two of the area's schools—Pleasant Valley and Pocono Mountain. Both schools had been playing a junior varsity schedule.

With the exception of Pleasant Valley and Pocono Mountain—who have all their letters of last season returning—the scholastic coaches generally have rugged rebuilding tasks confronting them.

Coach Jack Kist at East Stroudsburg High has the toughest in the area. Among the offensive starters of 1962, only fullback Mike Ajagian is back in the fold.

Heavy Losses
Quarterback Jack Van Horn halfbacks Jimmy Steele, John

Mosher and Dick Deiter are lost through graduation.

In the line, Kist has lost the services of ends Earl Palmer, Pete Maaser, and Ross Gordon; tackles Alan Schell, Bud Stann and John Rohner; guards Hank Harris and Eric Miller, and center Mike Boushell. It will be a completely new team for Eastburg this season.

Stroud Union's Jerry Stulgaitis, on the other hand, doesn't face so many complications and with a good nucleus to start from, probably carries much higher hopes than his inter-boro rival.

Stulgaitis has lost the services of fullback Don Baylor and halfback Tommy Schatzman, the co-captains of last year's squad. In the line, end Ed Nevil and guards Bill Garey and Stan Bush have left the West Main St. school. But the others are all returning, including quarterback Freddy Frantz and halfback Glenn Bising. The season should not be as dismal this year.

Losses Engler, Heard
Coach Elwood Petchel at Pen Argyl will have a tough time finding replacements for the stellar halfbacks of the past few years in the persons of Bobby Engler and Gary Heard. In addition, he also loses the services of quarterback Terry Sandt, end Roger Snyder, tackles Terry Miller and Tony Policelli, and guard Tom Knitter.

Mocony at Bangor yesterday greeted a squad of 59 candidates which is dotted with veterans of last year's squad, but key losses also prevail for the new grid mentor, too.

At Plus X, Coach Vince Sheanski has 11 lettermen returning which includes such standouts from last year's team as halfbacks John Raccato and Frank Godino; end Tom Sapone and Joe King; tackle John Falcone; guards Jeff Brucie and Frank Sapone, and fullback Steve Zegalia.

"We have more experienced boys than we've had in the past three years," says Vince.

Oakland Raiders Quiet Fans' Scornful Laughter

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Oakland's Raiders, the rag-tag team of the American Football League for three years, are, at this early stage of their new era, already quieting detractors' scornful laughter.

The key man in this rebirth of the Raiders is Al Davis, the new general manager and head coach who has brought unity to the squabling front office and organization to the playing field.

Fourth Coach
Davis is the fourth Raiders head coach in four years. But owners have given him a three-year contract to build up a team that won just one of 14 games last year.

Though only 33, Davis has 13 years of coaching experience, the last three as an assistant with San Diego of the AFL. He discounts the "genius" tag a national magazine gave him nine years ago when he was at The Citadel. He insists that "the whole answer is to get better football players than the other people have."

Which is what he has started out to do.

Art Powell played out his option with the New York Titans, intent on going to Canada. But Davis talked him into signing a Raider contract.

Now flanker end Powell is teaming with Bo Robertson in what could be the AFL's most dangerous pass receiving tandem.

Robertson, an Olympic games broad jump silver medalist, was shifted from tight halfback to the flank and caught nine aeriars for 220 yards and two scores in the opening two games.

Davis negotiated with Buffalo and obtained middle linebacker Arch Matsos, one of the best in the league for three years. Though no giant physically, Matsos has become the pillar of a defense that held its first two opponents to a total of 190 rushing yards.

Hail Williamsport 'Baseball Capital'

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Williamsport became the unofficial baseball capital of the world Monday, splashed with the gay color and fun-filled excitement of the 1963 Little League World Series.

Streets and buildings in this city of 16,000 were draped in gala red, white and blue bunting, offering greetings to Little Leaguers and their followers the world over.

Americans Topple Swim Marks

TOKYO (AP) — American swimmers testing the Tokyo waters in a preview of the Olympics here next year splashed off Monday with the dual meet against Japan, setting five world records and tying one.

The three-day swimming and diving meet wound up with the Americans on the long end of a 63-22 score. That was the worst beating ever given the Japanese in six meets dating back to 1931.

The Japanese won four of the previous meets, but never had a chance against this young crop of Americans.

In all, the Americans won 11 of 15 swimming events, and split the two dives.

The world mark in the 800-meter freestyle relay was the last to fall. An American quartet of Don Schollander, Dick McDonough, Ed Townsend and Roy Saari swam the distance in 8:07.3, whipping the Japanese four who hold the listed mark of 8:09.8. The time also bettered the 8:07.6 established by Santa Clara, Calif., swim club at the AAU championships this year in Chicago.

The losers swam 8:19.3, in the 50-meter outdoor pool.

Schollander also posted one of the four world marks set up in the first two days of the meet. He took the 200-meter freestyle in 1:38.5.

Saari cracked the 1,500-meter freestyle mark with 17:05.3. Schollander, 17, is from Santa Clara, and Saari, 18, from El Segundo, Calif.

Carl Robie, 18, of Philadelphia snapped the 200-meter butterfly standard, with a 2:08.2 performance, and the U.S. team in the 400-meter freestyle relay established the other mark of 3:36.1.

Richard McGeach of Southern California led the 100-meter backstroke standard of 1:00.9.

In Monday's wrapup, the Americans took 1-2-3 in the 100-meter freestyle, with McDonough, 20-year-old Villanova swimmer, first in 54 seconds, an American record.

Bowling Meet
EAST STROUDSBURG — The Commercial "C" Bowling League will meet Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Harmon's Recreation Center.

Area department stores, taverns, and club rooms were in a sporting mood, with unique Little League displays in their front windows, including pictures of past championship teams, and action photos of previous games.

To make sure of four participants in this year's World Series, it was decided that if there were any double winners in the four major tournaments those who lost in the playoffs of those tournaments would compete for a spot in the World Series.

Booked Solid
Hotels and motels already were almost solidly booked for the week.

The competition comes to a climax Saturday with the nationally televised championship game at 2 p. m.

Seven teams will be battling in this year's tournament—the 17th since "Mighty Mite" baseball got its start here 24 years ago as a league comprised of three local teams. The first World Series was held seven years later, in 1946.

This year's regional champs include Duluth, Minn. (North U.S.), Houston, (Tex.) South U. S., Stratford, Conn. (East U.S.), Granada Hills, Cal. (West U.S.), Valleyfield, Quebec, (Canada), Monterrey, Mexico (Latin America), and a U. S. Air Force dependents' team from Izmir, Turkey (Europe).

Red Tape
An eighth team, Tokyo, Japan, ran into some official red tape at the last minute and was scratched from the lineup. Little League officials said Japan has a law which prohibits giving visas to youngsters under 14 for the purpose of leaving the country to compete in sports events.

It was the sentimental darling of last year's series.

The other teams arrived Sunday and Monday, mostly by plane, for the week-long stay at the Little League summer camp here. The day was spent in practice sessions on surrounding fields, with each team getting one-half hour on the main diamond.

Even as they practiced, workmen began freshening up the series stadium with a new coat of green paint. The stadium has official Little League dimensions, with 60-foot base paths, a 46-foot mound and 200 feet to the outfield. Regulation dimensions are 90-foot base paths and 60-foot mound.

Triple Dead Heat At Arlington

CHICAGO (AP) — The seventh triple dead heat to win in the history of American thoroughbred racing — and the first involving a double daily payoff — was recorded Monday at Arlington Park.

In the second race — $3,500 claiming for 4-year-olds and up at one mile — W. H. Bishop's Royal Redress, Morton Johnson's Livingston and Mr. S. Chance, owned by Bill Terry Jr. and H. Crockett, were photographed in a dead heat.

YOUNG AT HEART—Daniel G. Warner (right) grasps bat with Max Hippler prior to Sunday's Old Timers game at Gordon Giffels Field, played between doubleheader of Stroudsburg-Saylorburg PMBL tilts. Warner was captain of the Saylorburg team which tied Analomink, 9-1. Hippler captained the losers.

Arnold Palmer Seeks Shot At Golf World Series Spot

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Arnold Palmer, who has won six tournaments this year but failed in the major ones, is considered the man to beat in the 18-hole playoff at Firestone Country Club course Tuesday for the 10th spot in the World Series of Golf next month.

Palmer, goldfod's leading money winner with $96,553, will go against Jacky Curit and Phil Rodgers for the right to compete with the winners of the four major tournaments in the World Series, also at Firestone, Sept. 7-8.

The other three spots in the fancy foursome, which will be competing for a first prize of $50,000, are sent.

Other Qualifiers
Jack Nicklaus, who won the first World Series last year, qualified twice for defense of his title by winning the PGA and Masters titles. Other qualifiers this year were Julius Boros, the U.S. Open champion, and Bob Charles, the British Open winner.

The World Series was set up last year as a showdown among the winners of the four major titles but the inaugural event had only three contestants, with Nicklaus beating Palmer and Gary Player.

To make sure of four participants in this year's World Series, it was decided that if there were any double winners in the four major tournaments those who lost in the playoffs of those tournaments would compete for a spot in the World Series.

His wife and three daughters, who sat on the front row of the spectator section during the 11 days of the trial, rested at a nearby hotel for some hours after the case went to the jury at 2:40 p.m. EST. Two of the daughters returned to the courtroom Monday night and were with Butts when the announcement of the recess was made.

Regardless of how Palmer fares in the playoff, he still will have a chance to become goldfod's first $100,000-a-year man here this week. He will play in the third annual $50,000 American Golf Classic, which starts Thursday at the Firestone course. The 72-hole tournament carries a first prize of $9,600.

His wife and three daughters, who sat on the front row of the spectator section during the 11 days of the trial, rested at a nearby hotel for some hours after the case went to the jury at 2:40 p.m. EST. Two of the daughters returned to the courtroom Monday night and were with Butts when the announcement of the recess was made.

As the hours ground on before that announcement, Butts sat impassively at the table with his hands clasped most of the time.

In charging the jury earlier, Judge Lewis R. Morgan said that truth is the complete defense to any action for libel.

Morgan said the burden was on the publishing company through a preponderance of evidence to prove that Butts passed on to Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant of Alabama advance information on Georgia plays before the two teams met last September. Alabama won 35-0, and Butts at that time was athletic director at Georgia.

The judge emphasized that "any libel committed against Coach Bryant, if there were libel, is not an issue in this case."

Bryant has sued Curtis Publishing Co. for $10 million in Federal court in Alabama over the same story.

The judge said that truth is the complete defense to any action for libel.

"If you find that Butts did give information to Bryant which could have affected the outcome or the score of the football game, you will find for the defendant company," he said.

On the other hand, Morgan said that if the jurors decide that the magazine failed to prove the truth of its story to rule in favor of Butts and fix the amount of damages he should receive.

He said that a person with a bad reputation would not be entitled to the same damages as one with an excellent reputation even if the libel were proved.

Key to the charges was a telephone conversation between Butts and Bryant, which Atlanta Insurance salesman George P. Burnett said he heard when he was inadvertently cut into the call.

The Post said Butts' alleged remarks gave Bryant football secrets which would have helped beat Georgia, but Bryant and several football players took the stand and said the information couldn't have figured in the outcome of the game.

Stuart's two homers and one by Frank Malone in the seventh were three of the nine hits surrendered by longtime Red Sox nemesis Pedro Ramos.

Jo Azcue homered, doubled and singled, driving in the other Cleveland runs.

Singles by rookie Vic Davalillo and Joe Adcock preceded Alvis' 15th homer in the fourth inning. The following inning Alvis again teed off on loser Arnold Earley after Larry Brown and Adcock had drawn walks.

Lagging Attendance N.Y. Runaway Casts A Pall

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees' runaway in what is laughingly called the American League pennant race has cast a frightening pall over the rest of the clubs whose lagging attendance is bound to suffer even more the rest of the season.

Even Joe Cronin, the normally optimistic league president, admitted Monday things looked

"bleak" but the man who made the climb from player to executive refused to push the panic button.

"Naturally, I'm disappointed with the standings," said Cronin. "The Yankees seem to have a safe lead but that's no reason for the other clubs to quit trying to overtake them. There still is a long ways to go and, as has been proven so many times before, anything can happen in baseball."

Take A Miracle
"Anything" would have to be a miracle if the Yankees should miss capturing their fourth successive league championship and their 13th in the last 15 years.

New York owns a 10½ game lead over its nearest rival. Not since early August of 1958 when they led by 17 games have the Yankees enjoyed a more comfortable margin.

If the Yankees play just .500 ball the rest of the way, the second place Chicago White Sox or the Minnesota Twins would have to win 31 of their remaining 39 games to tie.

"Things Look Bleak"
"Admittedly things look bleak at the moment," said Cronin, "but you never know. I remember back in 1928 the Yankees had a 17-game lead at just about this stage of the race. By Labor Day their lead had shrunk to a mere game. And that was the club that was supposed to be the best ever assembled."

The president declared there was only one way to end the Yankee dynasty.

"The other clubs must strive to build themselves up to the level of the Yankees," he said. "They cannot wait for the Yankees to weaken. They must continue to develop and bring up young ball players..."

Homers Twice
Bill White walked to open the Cardinal ninth and Boyer who hit his first homer in the seventh, followed with an opposite field homer to the pavilion roof in right tying the game 7-7. Reliever Jack Fisher got the next two men before Javier singled, and eventually scored on McCarver's single.

The loss dropped the Giants 6½ games back of the front-running Dodgers.

The Giants had pulled ahead 7-5 in their half of the ninth when with two out, Alou hit a 3-0 pitch for a triple to drive in two runs. Willie Mays' single had tied it 5-5, driving in Harvey Kuenn, who had singled.

Boyer's first homer came with the score tied 3-3. With one out, White walked and Boyer hit Giant starter Jack Sanford's first pitch into the left field seats.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dennis Bennett's five-hit pitching and a run-scoring single by Bobby Wine combined Monday night to give the surging Philadelphia Phillies their eighth straight victory, 1-0 over the New York Mets.

The victory moved the fourth-place Phillies to within 1½ games of third-place San Francisco. Philadelphia has won 35 of its last 53 games.

The only run of the game came in the second inning off starter and losing pitcher Galen Cisco, 7-13, on three straight singles after one out. Don Demeter singled to left, raced to third on Clay Dalrymple's base hit to right and scored when the sharp fielding, weak hitting Wine rifled a single up the middle.

Jerry Lucas Set To Play With Royals

CINCINNATI (AP) — Jerry Lucas, a three-time All-America basketball player at Ohio State, signed a one-year contract Monday with the Cincinnati Royals of the National Basketball Association—a team he rejected only about a year ago.

The signing had some strange angles.

It was Warren Hensel, a Cincinnati businessman who got Lucas' name on the contract and announced it, but actually he still doesn't own the club.

Negotiations for Hensel's purchase of the Royals have been going on for several months and Hensel said Monday he hopes to have the deal all wrapped up this week—possibly Wednesday.

He is buying the club from the Emprise Corp. of New York which bought it shortly before the end of last season from the Thomas E. Wood estate of Cincinnati.

Hensel has said all along he was sure he could sign Lucas to whom the Royals have held draft rights since before his graduation from college.

After his graduation, Lucas, now 23, turned down a Cincinnati offer and signed with the then Cleveland Pipers of the American Basketball League. That loop folded before he ever played a game.

TWINS, BUT NOT IDENTICAL

We can't even tell them apart by looking. But there is one vital difference. The all new Mercedes-Benz 190 sedan on top is powered by a gasoline engine. Below, the 190 D sedan powered by a diesel engine. Both are the last word in luxury with exceptional economy and very low maintenance. You have a choice of gasoline power or the unrivaled economy of a diesel engine.
